

COMPLETED SEARCHES

Assistant Controller
Luxury Retailer

Human Resources Director
Consumer Products

Account Manager
Medical Device

Tax Supervisor
Public Accounting

Director of SEC Reporting
Chemicals Manufacturer

Sr. Manufacturing Engineer
Medical Device

Audit Manager
Public Accounting

Production Planner
Chemicals Manufacturer

Marketing Manager
Healthcare

Cost Accountant
Specialty Packaging

DID YOU KNOW?

When three-letter airport codes became standard, airports that had been using two letters simply added an X (ie, LAX).

Taco Bell is named for its founder, Glen Bell.

In a 1917 letter to Winston Churchill, Admiral John Fisher used the phrase "O.M.G."

The rumbling sound your stomach sometimes makes is called a "borborygmi."

A pregnant goldfish is called a twit.

When the University of Nebraska Cornhuskers play football at home, the stadium becomes the state's third largest city.

Top Resume Killers

Job Specialization: Taking on job titles and responsibilities that are industry specific and not transferable to other companies.

Staying With A Company Too Long: Remaining with an employer for an extended period of time may suggest that you fear change and prefer a familiar environment. The exception is receiving numerous promotions during that tenure.

Lack Of Career Progression: Remaining at a specific career level for a protracted period is a definite career killer. It suggests a failure to perform and earn a promotion.

Job Hopping: Job hopping is probably the number 1 career killer. As a general rule, you should average 3 to 5 years at each position. If you are a victim of layoffs after a short tenure, a prospective employer will look at your entire work history and usually ignore a single exception.

Jack Of All Trades, Master of None: A work history that includes experience in multiple disciplines (sales, purchasing, logistics, IT, marketing and customer service) can indicate a person without career direction and depth of expertise.

Staying In One Industry Too Long: This can be problematic, especially if your industry is facing a rapid decline and your skills are not transferable.